PRO BULLFIGHTER

Bull rider. Bullfighter.
Cowboy protector. Clown.

Eric D. Olson has been called them all but is mostly widely known as a professional. A professional bullfighter that takes his job very seriously and thanks to a keen sense of timing, and a thorough understanding of bull riding, is fast becoming one of the most highly sought after professional bullfighters in the world of rodeo.

Daredevil. Thrill seeker. Fearless. Gutsy.

Eric has been described as all of the above. He began his rodeo career at an early age – always hanging around the chutes, in amongst the action, ready to help a friend in need. As a bull rider, he loved the thrill and challenge of every ride – that thrill and challenge eventually got him off the bull and in front of it, keeping him around the chutes, in amongst the action and ready to help a friend in need. Eric is a graduate of Rex Dunn's Bullfighting School and has been a PRCA member since 1993.

Agile. Confident.
Experienced. Trusted.

In the world of professional bull riding these are words that are mandatory when describing a bullfighter. Eric D. Olson has criss-crossed the United States providing cowboy protection for the elite few that dare to get on the back of a bull. They see his agility, they feel his confidence, and they know of his experience and most of all, they trust him. Eric is a professional. He knows the hazards of his occupation, he knows the responsibility he carries with him and he knows that people are counting on him.

He takes his job very seriously and yet somehow, when he steps into the arena, he makes it all look effortless and well...graceful.

Eric's easy-going manner, friendly personality and ability to tell a story, make him a natural crowd pleaser and committee favorite.

When all is said and done, he, as a cowboy at heart saying, "I love the people and there is something so gratifying about a slap on the back and someone saying, "thanks for being out there.""
